

New Editions of Old Favourites

Written by David Keeffe
Sunday, 21 August 2011 23:02 -

There is a lot of old brass band music that still deserves its place in the repertoire, but is not really in a playable state.

The sheet music is often small, and distorted because it's a reprint of a reprint of a reprint of suspect plates. There is no proper conductor's score - even though there must have been one at some time.

Music3149 is gradually preparing new editions of these pieces: we have two ready now -

- the Overture to Mozart's "the Magic Flute", arranged by William Rimmer, and newly edited by David Keeffe - some minor errors have been corrected, a separate flugel part has been made, and Mozart's timpani have been reinstated.
- Rimmer's own "Irresistible", newly typeset with a full score and separate flugel part, trombones now in treble clef and clearer articulations and dynamics

Please contact us if you're interested. The music will be supplied in printable PDF format.